UW-Superior offers an Elementary Education major to prepare teachers certified to teach birth through age 11 or age 6 through 13. Many of the courses for Elementary Education certification can be completed through online and independent coursework. Some courses must be taken on campus, and students are required to complete their student teaching requirement in Wisconsin, or adjacent areas of Minnesota traditionally served by the University of Wisconsin - Superior.

UW-Superior's Teacher Education Program offers a challenging curriculum, involving work with children in your local community and as a student teacher or teaching intern.The program prepares students for licensure in Wisconsin and is acceptable for licensure in many other states.

Each Elementary Education major also completes a teaching minor. The following minors can be completed online at UW-Superior:

- Early Childhood
- Geography
- Health Education
- Library Science - initial school library media certification
- Language Arts (Broadfield)
- Science
- Social Studies
- Special Education (without licensure)

UW-Superior has more than 100 years of experience in preparing teachers and over 30 years in delivering degree programs at a distance. Our Teacher Education Program enjoys an excellent reputation for quality and innovation. Graduates are highly regarded by their employers.

After earning a bachelor's degree, you can continue your education and professional growth throughout your career with our high-quality graduate programs in reading, instruction, special education, counseling, and educational administration.

Program Highlights:

- Most coursework can be completed without leaving your home, community, or job. Two co-requisite courses, requiring attendance on campus, are offered during the summer session.
- Coursework is directed by faculty members in the Teacher Education Program, all of whom have public school teaching experience.
- Each student has an academic advisor to offer guidance in selecting courses and choosing a minor or second major.
- Some UW-Superior scholarships are available for distance education students.
- Many resources are available on-line through the Jim Dan Hill Library at the University of Wisconsin-Superior.
